

ABSTRACT:

An improved structure of a buckle to fasten shoelaces includes a box like arcuate main body having a longitudinal gap and a pair of flanges in the top, a pair of cross-shaped
5 through holes in front and back walls for disposing a pair of sliders into the main body which further has an inverse U-shaped check plate at each end, a pair of inlets and pair of outlets spacedly formed in the bottom for inserting in and piercing out of a pair of tags of the shoelace, an elastic
10 plate mounted on the main body having a pair of detent mean on each end wall held by the flanges of the main body and a colorful cap covering the elastic plate and the main body having a retaining flange inside a front and a back wall held by the bottom of the main body. The front wall of the cap
15 further has a pair of retaining grooves in out surface for engage within the tags to make a butterfly configuration on the vamp of a shoe. If the cap is omitted the colors, patterns and luminous marking as well as the pair of retaining grooves may be positioned on the elastic plate.

20

25